

MILDLY VENOMOUS

Reticulated Centipede-eater (Aparallactus lunulatus)

Maximum Length:
54 cm

Other names:
Gebande Honderdpootvreter

A smallish slender snake that averages 40 cm with a maximum length of 54 cm. It is grey to olive brown above, often with dark-edged scales, and with a dark collar on the nape as well as up to 12 dark blotches on the back that fade with age. It inhabits moist savanna where it seeks shelter amongst rocks and under logs. It feeds exclusively on centipedes and scorpions. The Reticulated Centipede-eater is back-fanged with a small gape and rarely attempts to bite. Its venom is mild and has no effect on humans. Quite a common snake in some parts of its range.
